Brendan Gerdes is a nationally recognized trial attorney who brings a dynamic blend of litigation prowess and strategic counsel to his practice. He advises clients of all sizes, particularly in sophisticated and highly regulated industries, on complex litigation and disputes, internal and government investigations, regulatory defense and compliance, and everything in between.

Brendan has deep experience litigating cases in state and federal courts throughout the country, as well as alternative dispute forums abroad. He plays a pivotal role in successfully representing high-profile clients in public and closely-watched class action disputes. Whether guiding clients towards early settlements, representing them in trials, or exploring alternative resolutions, Brendan works collaboratively with clients and prioritizes client satisfaction above all else.

A trusted advisor in regulatory defense and compliance matters, clients rely on Brendan's insights to navigate evolving regulatory landscapes, such as biometric privacy, greenwashing, and anti-human trafficking laws. He serves as outside counsel for several technology startups, advising them on corporate governance, employment agreements, and general risk assessment.

Prior to joining RSHC, Brendan honed his skills at a prominent international law firm, where he focused his practice on complex commercial litigation, regulatory compliance, and government investigations for technology and financial services clients.

With a proven track record of success and a passion for advocacy, Brendan tackles the most challenging legal issues with skill and determination.
